Declaration of Personal and Social Responsibility

Being responsible is not a single task that is tackled and finished. Taking responsibility for your life is an on-going process that becomes the standard of behavior during college and lasts a lifetime. Being responsible for yourself requires maturity and fortitude. It is a discipline that takes time to develop. However, the rewards are a sense of satisfaction and knowing you can contribute to a better community built on respect for yourself and others.

- Demonstrate appropriate social behavior while working cooperatively with ASI faculty, staff, students and other University personnel.
- Participate fully in the ASI Orientation - June 19-June 21, 2020 – Orientation is MANDATORY.
- Respect the general UWL Residence Hall regulations and agree to comply with the following ASI Residence Hall Rules: Sunday – Thursday evening 10:00pm quiet hours and 12:00am curfew. Understand that respect for the Residence Hall rules is an essential element in successfully passing the ASI summer program.
- Accept full responsibility for attending and participating in all enrolled courses, mandatory tutoring sessions, meetings, and group activities. In addition, participation in ASI –related group activities and events during fall semester is required (ASI-UWL 100, 1 credit course). Realize that you have been selected for this program because you have great potential but you need extra academic support to be a successful student at UWL.
- Assume total responsibility to complete all assigned course-work in a satisfactory and timely fashion. Understand that attendance and completion of assignments are essential elements in achieving a passing grade.
- Conduct your behavior in a manner consistent with UWL’s mission, goals, policies, and procedures that govern the University community, particularly the student code of conduct. Respect and value the rights, freedoms and responsibility you have as a citizen of the UWL community.

To continue my participation in the 2020 Academic Success Institute, I agree to abide by the above Declaration of Personal and Social Responsibility.
